

Puyallup surgeon to give 'health talks' beginning June 26

PUYALLUP, Wash. — Cures for heartburn, hernia or gallbladder. If you suffer from these issues—or think you may have symptoms related to these health concerns—Dr. Robert C. Wright may have answers for you.

Wright, president, CEO and surgeon at the Puyallup-based Meridian Surgery Center, will give a series of free Health Talks at Meridian Surgery Center, 208 17th Ave. SE, Suite 201, in Puyallup, to help you decide if surgery is an appropriate solution for your health concern. All talks begin at 7 p.m.

The health talk dates and topics are:

- June 26— Hot Heartburn Cure Options— Endocynch, LINX, robots, Nissan and restoration of natural function.
- July 17— Hernia Surgery... Now or Later? Learn about causes, options for fixes, and how waiting for surgery can affect your health risks.
- Aug. 21— I roboto: Gallbladder Surgery in 2013: Robotic, laparoscopic, and minimally invasive options for my surgery.

The informal seminars will begin with a tour of the ambulatory surgery center, and after the brief talk, Dr. Wright will answer questions.

As surgical techniques have advanced to manage hernia issues in the past 10 years, hernia has become a popular area of research. Wright has published many research-based articles in all areas of hernia-related surgeries. He has become a specialist in Gastro Esophageal Reflux Disease (GERD), gallbladder and hiatal hernia repair and is one of the area's top laparoscopic surgeons. He started the Cascade Hernia Institute in 2011 to bring independent research opportunities to area medical students and offer the latest surgical techniques to patients.

The Health Talks are free, but a reservation is required for one of the 12 available seats. To reserve your spot, call 253.840.1999 or email frontdesk@robertwrightmd.com.
